

Abstract

A synchroniser for use in a receiver which receives signals, wherein the synchroniser provides a digital control signal, the control signal defining a plurality of different levels; controls the level provided by successive ones of the control signals, successive ones of the control signal defining different values; and estimates the difference between the levels of successive ones of the control signals.